QUICK EDIT

On the International Nurse Day today which also marks the 200th birth anniversary of Florence Nightingale, entire world is feeling grateful to the exceptional role played by the nurses across the globe. In the times of Covid-19 crisis, the nurses have been working tirelessly to ensure the recovery of every Corona affected persons to the extent of risking their own health. While world today stands united in expressing its gratitude towards them, we salute their spirit of service, dedication and untiring effort in the service of the mankind.

The Prime Minister Shri Narendra Modi has interacted with the chief ministers of all the states and UTs on 11th May 2020. It was fifth such meeting through which India as a 'Team' has come together to fight the Covid-19 crisis. It not only represents the idea of 'Cooperative Federalism' enunciated by the PM but also shows the united spirit of India. While India has been so far able to contain the pandemic and performed well on various health and recovery parameters, there is no doubt that the fight is going to be a long one. A huge country like India needs to strategise comprehensively keeping the interests of various sectors in consideration. As the Prime Minister is set to address the nation today at 08.00 PM, the roadmap for dealing with the pandemic in the country will become clear further.

India has to continue to show its united spirit in dealing with the pandemic. There is no doubt that in the strong leadership of the Prime Minister Shri Narendra Modi, India will be able to overcome this crisis very soon.
